"A diamond in the rough
Is a diamond sure enough,
For before it ever sparkles
It is made of diamond stuff.
Of course some one has to find it
Or it never would be found
And some one has to grind it
Or it never would be ground.
But when it's found
And when it's ground
And when it's burnished bright,
That diamond everlastingly
Just flashes out its light."

During the past two months a number of the diamonds of our own little village have been burnishing and last Saturday they flashed out their brilliancy to the public when they presented "Among the Breakers" at the Coffee Club.

Wm. O'Neal and Esther Smith, were quite expert in the Irish dialect and the audience very much enjoyed the good acting of both. The shaking up and broom thrashing given the colored servant were excellent.

M. E. Permort appeared well at home in the possession of a large fortune, and ready to do the proper thing when the time came for dividing.

Roy Archibald, whose part was a difficult one carried it through finely.

The acting of Carl Beacock and Percy Cochran as became their stations, was only equalled by the facility with which they transferred their affections. As a news reporter Mr. Beacock has in hand the art of sufficiently embellishing, to make the false appear as true, while Mr. Cochran was right at home as a rich man's son.

Mrs. Allison in both appearance and acting was equally "romantic." Her youthful ways and days are not as yet forgotten.

Beth Kennedy was indeed a "bright star" and played well her part of an innocent and unsophistocated life-long maid of a light house.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Chamberlin as representatives of coon-land and the witchery kingdom "flashed out" their light in such measure as would make one think they had been but recently burnished.

The Piano duet by Misses Langley and Sykes and the singing by the quartette composed of Messrs. J. E. Palmer, Dr. Merrill and Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. Wilson was greatly appreciated by the audience.

On the whole it was an emphatic success and much praise is due not only those who appeared on the stage, but also those who were actively engaged in various other ways.

There were about 250 present and those who were not there have good reason for regret. Come out next time and help home talent.

SPREAD GOSPEL OF FARMING

Immense Amount of Good Being Done Throughout the Country by U. S. Agricultural Department.

An enormous amount of good work is now being accomplished in spreading the gospel of agriculture throughout our country by the government in conjunction with farmers' institutes.

During the past year 71 instruction trains covering tours of over 40,000 miles, were operated. Over 12,000 fair associations are in operation in the several states, representing a membership of 246,000. The amount paid in premiums during one year was over two and one-half million dollars.

In speaking of the results and effects of this work, Secretary Wilson said: "The awakening of the people to the value of agricultural instruction and to the possibilities of usefulness through extension teaching has created a demand for this instruction far beyond the power of the states to supply. The inadequacy of present equipment for meeting the agricultural educational needs of rural people has become so apparent that several bills have been presented before congress looking to additional appropriations for carrying on extension work. The states are also adding annually to their appropriations for agricultural extension in very marked degree. California during the past year increased her appropriation from $10,000 for institute work to $15,000 per year; Illinois, from $23,650 to $29,000; Kansas from $27,500 to $35,000; Minnesota, from $18,000 to $23,000; Nebraska, from $10,000 to $17,500; New York, $25,000 to $35,000; Ohio, $22,000 to $26,400; Oklahoma, $5,000 to $10,500; South Dakota, $9,400 to $13,000; Utah, $5,000 to $10,000, and Washington, $8,500 to $10,000. These appropriations show in an unmistakable way growing interest in agricultural improvement by the states and their confidence in the value of the work of the farmers' institutes as well as appreciation of what they have done for agriculture in the past."

GOOD FEED FOR THE COLTS

Scalded Mash or Bran With Oats Added Is Fine Thing—Once a Week Will Be Found Excellent.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

In reading an agricultural paper recently I noticed that an editor advised a farmer to feed a colt during the winter months a ration of either corn and hay or oats and hay, no bran, greed feed or ground stuff.

Now a young colt, whether a yearling or two-year-old, will not do so well on a whole grain and hay ration for five months.

The youngsters have probably been on succulent pastures all spring and summer and fall, and when they are up and fed this dry ration exclusively they miss their grain. Bran is a very good substitute and a scalded mash or bran with oats, scalded, added, is a fine thing to give once a week and at night.

This mash will keep the colts in good condition and will keep their bowels moving.

Sod fields, rye, wheat, oats or vetch, all make good winter grazing when the weather conditions permit.

One bushel of bran to four of oats or corn will be about the right proportion for colts, in fact for horses of all ages.

Keep plently of salt convenient, but not in the grain box in the manger, for many horses and colts dislike their salt mixed with their grain.

A lump of rock salt is all right in the manger, but not loose table salt.

Crops for Cut-Over Lands.

In the northern part of the states of Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota there are large areas of cut-over land, which only now are being brought under cultivation. Much of this land is sandy, and the ordinary methods practiced on loam and clay soils result in failure. A careful study has been made of the experience of hundreds of men who have attempted to farm these sandy soils, and the information obtained by the department of agriculture in this study indicates quite clearly the method by which certain types of farming can be made successful in the region. Hairy vetch has been found to be eminently adapted to these soils and promises to become important as a seed crop. The department has also ascertained the methods by which red clover can be profitably grown. The sandy soils have also proved to be adapted to potato growing when proper methods are followed.

Apple Orchards.

At the conclusion of an experiment to answer the question, "Is it necessary to fertilize the apple orchard?" the New York experiment station comes to the conclusion that in "the average western New York tilled apple orchard, if well drained, well tilled and properly supplied with organic matter from stable manure or cover crops, commercial fartilizers are little needed."

His Lot.

"In the critical times upon which he has fallen it behooves the police to be vigilant and not let the enemy catch them sleeping at their post." "In other words, a policeman's lot is not a happy one."

At Both Ends of the 'Phone

By ELLA RANDALL PEARCE

Bir-r-r-r-r! Miss Gertrude Mackenzie, tiny, trim and brisk in manner, picked up the telephone receiver and answered the summons over the wire with a clear, crisp "Hello-yes." Then, with a change of tone, "Who is this, please? Who—for goodness' sake—Janice!'

The single occupant of the outside office, separated from the inside one where Miss Mackenzie sat by an oak railing and gateway, fairly jumped as the name left the speaker's lips. He was a young man of prepossessing appearance, very dark, with bright blue eyes, and a lofty, abstracted air that would have seemed somewhat amusing in one less distinguished looking. He had paid no attention to the young woman until that single ejaculation fell upon his ear. Janice! Why should he think of her? Was there only one Janice in the world? It was an odd name, to be sure, and perhaps —then he found himself listening eagerly to one side of the conversation, as he sat back and unfolded a newspaper before his face.

"Janice, well, I am surprise! Oh, fine, but I thought you were—What! didn't you marry him after all? But I thought that was what you went to London for. I never got the letter—no, indeed. Ye-e-s, but I can't tell you now. Can't you come up to the house soon?"

The young man outside shifted uneasily in his seat, and peered around a corner of his paper. Miss Mackenzie had lowered her voice, and her words reached him indistinctly—and he was growing anxious. Janice—London—to be married? It began to sound like a familiar story to him.

The girl's laughter rippled guardedly across the office. "I don't believe it. How about the one you met at Atlantic City and raved about all last winter?" she said, teasingly.

Atlantic City! That was where he had men Janice Ford, just about one year ago. Surely it was she—his old sweetheart of a brief, beautiful romance by the sea, who now was speaking at the other end of the 'phone. If he could but see her—speak to her again!

Then came his companion's crisp tones. "Oh, I'd love to, but not today. I've had a 'quick lunch' already, for I expect Mr. Hadley in at any moment. Where are you now? At the Mayfair—oh!"

A heavy scrambling noise in the outer office and the loud slamming of the door, proclaimed the sudden flight of the late solitary occupant.

"Nothing's the matter, Janice," answered Miss Mackenzie. "Only there was a splendid-looking chap sitting here waiting for Mr. Hadley, and he's just thrown over a few chairs and bolted, taking the door with him. Well, now I want to tell you something."

She launched into a recital of her own personal affairs, thereby, if she had but known it, doing a certain young man a great favor; for the "splendid-looking chap" was making the best possible time in covering the space between the office building out of which he had rushed and the hostelry called the Mayfair.

Of course it was his—that is, the same Janice, and she was not married. Perhaps she had quite forgotten him by this time, but he would like to know. And, if he were to lose her now—well, of course he could see Miss Mackenzie. But Janice might hear of it, and take flight again. Besides he wanted to see her—oh, how he longed to see her! He had tried to forget her, and probably would have succeeded if she had remained in London and married the wealthy Englishman who had won her from him with his dazzling fortune. Why had she not married Cuthbert Castle? He knew that such had been her intention when she had sailed from New York with her sister-in-law, who had really planned and carried out the affairs of the "brilliant match." Why had Janice changed her mind?

Quite breathless was the young man who hurried into the corridor of the Mayfair and looked anxiously along the line of telephone booths ranged across one side of the reading room. White feathers—large rosy face underneath; next, big, overshadowing black hat brim—sharp nose in view; ah! quaint little straw bonnet with a perky lace bow, a fluff of amber hair, a soft, pink cheek, sweeping brown lashes—Janice! She was just rising from her seat in the booth when he caught sight of her; and he hastened down the other side of the room, out into the corridor, while she adjusted her scarf and veil.

Tall, calm, and with a lofty, abstracted air, stood a dark young man near the Mayfair entrance, as Janice Ford tripped along, quite unsuspectingly. Then, with a start, she recognized the figure ahead, hesitated as if about to turn aside, approached with heightened color, and averting her face, would have gone by; but he met her squarely, face to face, extending a welcoming hand.

"Is it possible!" he said cordially. "You have nearly taken my breath away, Mrs.—er—Castle. Is that right?"

Janice nodded her head, and fussed with her scarf.

"Your memory is all right, Mr. Dillingham," she said, with nervous animation, not seeking to correct his error.

His bright blue eyes were searching her flushed face, but he maintained his indifferent air. How lovely she looked—lovelier than ever!

"Are you sight-seeing in America?" he asked politely. "Or did you get—homesick?"

"Neither," smiled Janice. "My—husband had some business here, and so—so——"

"Then you intend to return to London, soon?"

"Yes—yes, next week."

"Then," said Dillingham, in slow, deliberate tones, "may I not have the pleasure of your company at luncheon—once more before you go? Today?"

The girl's eyes met his.

"We parted in rather unfriendly fashion before, you know," went on the low tones. "Let us wipe out the memory of that last hour by a pleasant one—here."

"I—I have an engagement for lunch. I——"

Dillingham caught her elbow in the hollow of a firm hand. His eyes were blazing then as they looked at her, blazing with fascinating blue flames.

"Janice, look at me. You have no engagement—you have no husband. I know—and more than this I know. I was in Mr. Hadley's office while you were telephoning."

"Oh!"

"Yes, and you have shown me, now—that you—Janice!"

"Please, Ellis, don't look at me like that, here," whispered Janice. "Everybody's looking at us. You're very mysterious and very impertinent, but I'll go somewhere and listen to you—if you won't look at me as if you meant to eat me."

"It's eating time," said Dillingham, falling into an easy stride beside her as they walked along the corridor together. Janice drew him into the reading room.

"I want to 'phone to Gertrude," she said. "Come with me; you shall hear."

They crowded into the little booth, looking happily into each other's eyes.

* * * * * * *

Bir-r-r-r! Miss Mackenzie caught up the receiver again. A soft familiar voice came over the wire, with a new intense vibration in its tones.

"Gertrude, are you too busy to listen? That splendid chap who ran out of your office is my Atlantic City friend—yes, he's her now. And you were quite right. That's why I didn't stay in London and marry the Castle millions. But I didn't suppose he'd ever, ever forgive me. And I'm so glad. That's all, now—good-by. Wait a minute, he wants to speak to you."

Then, from the other end of the 'phone, came deep, full masculine tones, deliberately distinct. "Will you kindly tell Mr. Hadley that Mr. Ellis Dillingham will call at his office tomorrow morning? Thank you—and—bless you, Miss Gertrude Mackenzie."

African Wireless Telegraphy.

Writing from German Africa, a European tourist says: "We found here in the dense forest, among people who know nothing of modern scientific discoveries or of time and labor-saving invention, a good and practical wireless telephone. The natives have for purposes of ceremony, peaceful and warlike, drums of various dimensions made of wood, and these, when beaten, emit sounds of about an octave in range. Aside from the ceremonies the drums are used also as means of communication, and the manner of striking, the number of strokes, the pauses, etc., make up words and sentences which are readily understood for miles around. We had a proof of it one day. Our caravan was ready to start when our head servant stopped suddenly in his work, listened intently and then gave unmistakable signs of pleasure. We learned later that the indistinct sounds conveyed to him the news that a boy had been born to his brother in a neighboring village."

Disclosed Crime in Sleep.

Because he talked in his sleep, Andrew J. McCorrell of Findlay, Ohio, has gone to the penitentiary to serve six years for robbery. After receiving his sentence McCorrell, with three other prisoners, assaulted the sheriff and escaped. McCorrell believed he had killed the sheriff and it so preyed on his mind that he talked about it in his sleep while he was being held under arrest for drunkenness at Little Rock, Ark. The turnkey took notes and informed the authorities at Findlay.

FACTS FEATURES and FANCIES for WOMEN

CHICAGO.—Madame Fashion's unconquerable appetite for frills is being satisfied now by making overskirts clinging and flounces flat. Silhouetttes are as slim as ever, despite the draperies and the triple flounces which distinguish late winter costumes and, secure in the consciousness that she is looking attractively smart, Dame Fashion is plunging headlong into the midwinter festivities and having a very busy time indeed. So gay is this initial month of 1912 that every woman in the social swim rarely has leisure to change her garb between noontime and dinner time, but hurries from a luncheon to a "bridge" and then on to a reception or to a tea.

Fortunately all of the new afternoon costumes, whether worn by Madame Fashion or her friends, are a delight to the eyes. Their designs become the figure, their colors accord with the hair, and many of them are picturesque. Some of the utmost appealing models bearing a haunting resemblance to a familiar picture and, after a bit, Madame Fashion exclaims:

"Why, the fur-bordered, crossover fronts of that bodice; the long, tight sleeves; the straight little skirt with its scallop-edged, three-tier flounces and the huge muff—all of violet-shot taffeta—are the replica of grandmother's tinted daguerreotype! How charming she must have looked a half century ago when Chicago was merely a lusty infant village instead of a gigantic city, and she could do up all her calls in a single afternoon—even if she walked."

Single Lapel Retained.

The single lapel, always covering the left front from the top edge of the arm's eye to the waist line, persists upon afternoon costumes of handsome materials, but notably so on the "bridge" gowns of satin cloth and heavy lace. The mesh, dyed beige or taupe or tan to match the shade of the cloth, appears in the underskirt and occasionally forms all of the bodice with the exception of its sleeve and single lapel. They are of satin surfaced fabric, and not infrequently with both trimmings. The one-sided effect of the fur banded lapel is sometimes balanced by one of the square-backed fur hood collars. These are a feature of visiting toilets, which are made with hip-long, short-waisted coats and fur banded narrow skirts which touch the floor evenly all round, although below the knees at back and front considerable extra length is gathered into the side seams. The hat and muff are trimmed with fur matching that used upon the costume, but the coat is never lined. It is worn as though it were a bodice. The wrap which actually furnishes warmth when out of doors is left in the carriage or in the ante-room of the hostess' house.

Because genuine Irish, Venise and point lace in enormous quantities are used with black silk velvet, the magpie combination continues to be ultra-fashionable for costumes intended for afternoon and evening festivities. It is most prominent among dinner gowns and is worn by matrons of any age, although tabooed for the debutante, who vainly tries to duplicate the strong contrast by trimming her dark brown, green, blue or wine velvet afternoon visiting suit with white lace, cloth or fur.

Color Combinations.

Oddly contrasting color combinations are used for theater and restaurant gowns. Shades which never before have been blended—in the memory of the present generation—are seen in the popular half-long frocks of pale green or apricot satin veiled with violet chiffon, of taupe brown with pale pink or yellow, of light blue with purple and of shell pink with dark blue. Any of these combinations are smarter than black or white with a primary shade. But the coloring of these gowns is as "moonlight unto sunlight" when compared with those which Madame Fashion reserves for balls and those entertainments when all society is en grande tenue. Gorgeous effects are produced by combining mandarin orange panne with gold Venetian laces, rose chiffon velvet with silver tissue and white satin with dull green-gold metallic embroideries. The brocaded satins in white with silver, or black with gold, are in high favor—with those who can afford to buy them—and on some of these are seen the two-tier sleeves of metallic embroidered net that cling to the arms as far as the elbow and from there fall away in long, sharp points.

Wraps and caps are dominated by salient oriental features, the swathing draperies and faintly defined sleeve and the turban shapes with "jewel" trimmings, chiffon velvet in rose, blue and soft green tones prevail among the loose, long cloaks whose trimming consist chiefly of a long, pointed collar and wide cuffs of ermine or sable, while the caps (which have entirely replaced the head scarf) are en suite—the crown, whether round or square, matching the wrap and its banding the neck and wrist finishings.

Coiffure Easily Arranged.

Madame Fashion's coiffure is now so simply arranged that having once mastered the art of doing it so that the ears and the brow are concealed, she can manage without the attendance of a hairdresser, but the money thus saved is neded for another important detail of the toilet. The edict has gone forth that for every festal gown there must be an equally festal looking pair of buttoned shoes or slippers. This means that if there are a half dozen new costumes ordered for late winter dinners and dances and receptions an equal number of dressings for the feet must be broken in and a search inaugurated for hosiery of a matching shade.

Gray satin having the soft brown undertone is the material of a smart, yet practical wrap for afternoon festivities of the late winter. The long and very full sleeves, cut in one with the garment, have clearly defined upper seams that are a continuation of the ones crossing the shoulders, and below the elbows is a deep tuck which merges into the lapped over side form of the coat. Natural blue fox bands the wrists, the neck and the long, loose fronts of the garment.

A carriage cloak of heavy crepe de chine is closely brocaded with golden foliage and bordered with a deep fringe of white silk and gold bead strands. To render the white and gold of the crepe still more prominent, the wrists and throat of this garment are bordered with pointed black fox and there is a Quaker bonnet (such as no orthodox Quakeress would dream of wearing) of white satin veiled with gold net and trimmed and faced with black satin.

One-Piece Afternoon Gown.

Right for almost every afternoon occasion is a one-piece gown of black satin-surfaced cloth pictured, made with a scarf-draped overdress knotted just above the ankles and with a bodice cut out at the neck and off above the elbows to reveal a guimpe of pearl beaded white jet. The stole and muff of white fox are lined with white satin and the roll brimmed sailor hat of black panne velvet is trimmed with a broad band of white fox.

Skirts are narrower than ever in Paris when they are narrow. But there are skirts decidedly full about the feet—a fullness accomplished by means of an accordian-plaited flounce, or simply by a deep-gathered one. The narrow skirts are not tight, however, and the full ones are close-clinging. The body, resolutely kept slender, is tightly corseted below the waist line and all undergarments are suppressed. But this matter of tight skirts, full ones, high chokers and sleeves uncomfortably dropping over the hands and cumbering the arms with thick folds, so plentifully presented to us by all the great designers, women will settle for themselves. The designers cheerfully acknowledge that they themselves do not know what will be the prevailing mode two months hence.

Two Styles in Sleeves.

Next to the triple sleve comes the long one that fits very snugly and has a slash from the shoulder to the hand, where a row of buttons makes an attractive finish. The long slash is filled in with soft frills of lace or malines puffed to scanty fullness. Now and then a touch of bright color is introduced with a dark tone, the color note appearing under the lace in the slash.

A simple afternoon gown of nattier blue charmeuse and ninon is pictured. The swathed sash and buttons are in a deeper shade of satin.

Perfect Feminine Face.

A perfect feminine face should measure exactly five times the width of an eye across the cheek-bones. The eye should be exactly two-thirds the width of the mouth, and the length of the ear exactly twice that of the eye. The space between the eyes should be exactly the length of one eye.

SPREAD GOSPEL OF FARMING

Immense Amount of Good Being Done Throughout the Country by U. S. Agricultural Department.

An enormous amount of good work is now being accomplished in spreading the gospel of agriculture throughout our country by the government in conjunction with farmers' institutes.

During the past year 71 instruction trains covering tours of over 40,000 miles, were operated. Over 12,000 fair associations are in operation in the several states, representing a membership of 246,000. The amount paid in premiums during one year was over two and one-half million dollars.

In speaking of the results and effects of this work, Secretary Wilson said: "The awakening of the people to the value of agricultural instruction and to the possibilities of usefulness through extension teaching has created a demand for this instruction far beyond the power of the states to supply. The inadequacy of present equipment for meeting the agricultural educational needs of rural people has become so apparent that several bills have been presented before congress looking to additional appropriations for carrying on extension work. The states are also adding annually to their appropriations for agricultural extension in very marked degree. California during the past year increased her appropriation from $10,000 for institute work to $15,000 per year; Illinois, from $23,650 to $29,000; Kansas from $27,500 to $35,000; Minnesota, from $18,000 to $23,000; Nebraska, from $10,000 to $17,500; New York, $25,000 to $35,000; Ohio, $22,000 to $26,400; Oklahoma, $5,000 to $10,500; South Dakota, $9,400 to $13,000; Utah, $5,000 to $10,000, and Washington, $8,500 to $10,000. These appropriations show in an unmistakable way growing interest in agricultural improvement by the states and their confidence in the value of the work of the farmers' institutes as well as appreciation of what they have done for agriculture in the past."

GOOD FEED FOR THE COLTS

Scalded Mash or Bran With Oats Added Is Fine Thing—Once a Week Will Be Found Excellent.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

In reading an agricultural paper recently I noticed that an editor advised a farmer to feed a colt during the winter months a ration of either corn and hay or oats and hay, no bran, greed feed or ground stuff.

Now a young colt, whether a yearling or two-year-old, will not do so well on a whole grain and hay ration for five months.

The youngsters have probably been on succulent pastures all spring and summer and fall, and when they are up and fed this dry ration exclusively they miss their grain. Bran is a very good substitute and a scalded mash or bran with oats, scalded, added, is a fine thing to give once a week and at night.

This mash will keep the colts in good condition and will keep their bowels moving.

Sod fields, rye, wheat, oats or vetch, all make good winter grazing when the weather conditions permit.

One bushel of bran to four of oats or corn will be about the right proportion for colts, in fact for horses of all ages.

Keep plently of salt convenient, but not in the grain box in the manger, for many horses and colts dislike their salt mixed with their grain.

A lump of rock salt is all right in the manger, but not loose table salt.

Crops for Cut-Over Lands.

In the northern part of the states of Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota there are large areas of cut-over land, which only now are being brought under cultivation. Much of this land is sandy, and the ordinary methods practiced on loam and clay soils result in failure. A careful study has been made of the experience of hundreds of men who have attempted to farm these sandy soils, and the information obtained by the department of agriculture in this study indicates quite clearly the method by which certain types of farming can be made successful in the region. Hairy vetch has been found to be eminently adapted to these soils and promises to become important as a seed crop. The department has also ascertained the methods by which red clover can be profitably grown. The sandy soils have also proved to be adapted to potato growing when proper methods are followed.

Breed of Capons.

The question usually comes up, What is the best breed for capons? All breeds, says a writer in an exchange. That is, whatever variety of fowls one has, by all means caponize your surplus cockerels; but for market purposes the larger breeds are of course preferable. The Plymouth Rock, for instance, is as good as the best; I, at least, am perfectly satisfied with them, and come to this conclusion after trying several other breeds. But the best results in this, as well as in any other line of work, are attainable only by persistent effort, and doing it all in a thorough, businesslike way, having perfection as our goal and watchword, and then strive to win it.

Fat Chickens.

It is not necessary to keep chickens fat, especially while growing, but it is very important to keep them in a good thrifty condition.

Utterly Wretched

Nervous Prostration Long Endured Before Remedy was Found.

Miss Minerva Reminger, Upper Bern, Pa., writes: "For several years I had nervous prostration, and was utterly wretched. I lived on bread and beef tea because my stomach would not retain anything else. I took many remedies, but obtained no relief until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, when I began to gain at once. Am now cured."

Pure, rich blood makes good, strong nerves, and this is why Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies and enriches the blood, cures so many nervous diseases.

Just Boys.

"I inquired once," says Mr. Arthur D. Dean in the World's Work, "of a group of teachers what they taught. One said 'mathematics,' another replied 'English,' still another, 'science,' but the fourth—God bless the little prophetess—merely said: 'Please, sir; just boys.'"

Money Concealed in Petticoat.

Mrs. Herman Nicolay of Norwich heard a rustling in one of her petticoats. She ripped it open and found seven certificates of deposit on different banks amounting to $3,700. The petticoat had been the property of the woman's mother-in-law.

"Too much, I guess; I've been rejected as a juror six times in succession."—Chicago Tribune.

PISO'S REMEDY 25 CTS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists. 25 CTS. FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

Never attempt to polish a kitchen range until all the grease and dirt has been removed from it. Dip a rag in some soot and with this remove all grease stains. Take off varnish marks with tissue paper, moistened with vinegar. When the ironwork of the stove is discolored through the heat it should be well rubbed with a soapy flannel and then thickly coated with black lead. To obtain an absolutely black surface mix a little ammonia with the black lead.

Coal oil will soften the old paint brushes used last year. Place them in a can of the oil and wash them well in warm soap suds.

Rugs have a tiresome way of curling at the corners, which spoils their appearance and in the end the corners are torn away. To insure against this, directly a rug is bought bind it on the under side with stout Holland webbing.

To wash soiled dress shields lay them on a board or table, soiled side up, and give a thorough scrubbing with a stiff brush and any good laundry soap, with plenty of lukewarm water. Hold under a faucet until completely rinsed. Do not squeeze, but hang each dripping piece on the line until dry.

The life of old linoleum may be lengthened somewhat by giving it a coat of varnish. When dried the varnished surface is easily kept clean with a damp cloth. Where there is a badly worn spot in the center it is a good plan to cut the linoleum through the middle and bring the two outer edges together before varnishing.

Stewed Liver.

Cut up in slices half a pound of calf's liver and the same quantity of fat bacon; put first a layer of bacon at the bottom of a pie dish, then one of liver; sprinkle with salt and pepper; add a medium sized onion and one apple, both cut up; cover down and let it stew gently in the oven for about an hour and a quarter. SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. I am glad to tell anyone what your medicines have done for me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Lynch Also Avoided Operation.

Jessup, Pa.—"After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organic inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed.

"Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it for two months I was a well woman."—Mrs. JOSEPH A. LYNCH, Jessup, Pa.

Women who suffer from female ills should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one of the most successful remedies the world has ever known, before submitting to a surgical operation.

A Man-Factory.

The Self Master colony at Union, N. J., is a mill that gets its grist from gutters and levees and grinds from it men who are independent and honest. The method of the colony is to take a man without asking him questions, to put him on his feet by setting him at some useful task, and by giving him complete liberty and 50 cents a week.

The Self Master colony has room for 30 men at a time, and the accommodations always are crowded. Its struggle is a keen one, for the colony aims to be self-supporting. It draws its members from seven classes—the man unable to find immediate employment, the man in middle life who has lost his business, the intemperate young man trying to control himself, the country boy stranded in the city, the rich man's son, wayward and estranged from his family, the man discouraged through domestic troubles, and the man run down physically and mentally and needing outdoor work. These are the worth-saving, who, if no help is offered them, drift down through the strata of free lodging-house existence into the mire of hobodom, criminality and hopeless mendicancy.—Henry Carter in the World's Work.

Greek Theater Is Not Greek.

Another architectural fallacy has exploded. Prof. Charles Knapp of Columbia university, who lectured before the San Francisco Archaeological society on the subject of "The Roman Theater," summoned the temerity to declare before his audience that the Greek theater at Berkeley isn't a Greek theater at all. Professor Knapp even denied the structure the right to claim to be Roman.

He claims that the well-known scene of open air Sunday concerts is a sort of hybrid, of Greek and Roman styles of building, the like of which has never before been erected in the history of the world.

The ground upon which he denies the Berkeley structure the right to the term "Greek" is that its stage is too deep, too wide and too high.

HANDY CORNER CLOSET

OF ESPECIAL CONVENIENCE IN THE FARM HOUSE.

Take Up Little Room and May Be Made Very Commodious—Should Be Colored to Match Woodwork of Room.

The size of a corner closet, which may be made in a great variety of designs, may vary to suit the housewife's convenience. They may be built in the wall, when the house is built, or they may be added afterward.

A very convenient size for a corner closet is four feet wide, which will give two feet deep, in a right-angled corner of a square room.

In making one of these closets, the supports for the shelves should be nailed firmly to the studding in the wall, and if the lumber for the shelves is dressed on both sides, which it should be, it may cut to quite an advantage, and much be saved, as the same level will fit each side of the wall.

The shelves may continue as far as the floor, or there may be a space left any height desired, and a curtain, or curtains, hung before them.

The amount of lumber required to build such a closet is less than fifty feet. Four shelves, their supports and the doors.

If pine or poplar lumber is used, it may be stained and varnished to match the woodwork in which the room is finished.

The fastenings for the doors should be placed on the under side of the shelves, as this will leave the shelves free of anything that would interfere with setting boxes, jars, or anything of the kind that requires to be set level.

As It Sounded to Him.

"How did Smiggles win Mrs. Willjums over to giving her consent to his marrying her daughter?" asks the young man with the large pipe.

The Coughs of Children

They may not cough today, but what about tomorrow? Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. This cough medicine is especially good for children. No anodynes. No alcohol.

Many a child is called dull and stupid when the whole trouble is due to a lazy liver. We firmly believe your own doctor will tell you that an occasional dose of Ayer's Pills, sugar-coated, will do such children a great deal of good. Ask him.

The Poultry Yard.

Never set a thin, lousy hen. She wont stay her time out.

On cold evenings the hens should be sent to roost with full crops.

Especially at this time of year, the fireless brooder is to be recommended.

Any egg eaters in the flock? Make the nests as dark as possible that will help; If it doesn't discourage the culprit, sharpen up the ax.

A good way to prevent hens from overturning their drinking vessels, is to punch a hole in the side—near the top of an old tin pail or tomato can—hang it up on a nail driven in to the woodwork of the chicken house about six inches from the ground. Be sure there are no sharp edges to the can, or that the head of the nail does not protrude more than half an inch.

Most of the ways of breaking up hens from sitting are cruel, and tire and distress the innocent hens who are not to blame for their instinct. The kindest way is the following: When it is necessary to stop the inclination, place the hen in a nice clean coop, alone, with nice fresh grass, and all the fresh meat, cut fine, that she will eat. The meat immediately increases the egg nourishment, and while the hen is having a really good time, she is fast preparing herself to commence laying eggs. It will take but two or three days before she forgets all about sitting, having other things to attend to.—Farm Journal.

Employer and Employe

In plain sight of all the employees in a salmon canning factory at Steveston, B. C., the manager has posted the following "Ten Commandments" as he styles them:

1. Don't lie. It wastes my time and yours. I am sure to catch you in the end and that is sure to be the wrong end.

2. Watch your work, not the clock. A long day's work makes a long day short; and a short day's work makes my face long.

Give me more than I expect, and I will give you more than you expect. I can afford to increase your pay if you increase my profits.

4. You owe so much to yourself you cannot afford to owe any one else, keep out of debt or keep out of my shops.

5. Dishonesty is never an accident. Good men, like good women never see temptation when they meet it.

6. Mind your own business and you will soon have a business of your own to mind.

7. Don't do anything here which hurts your self respect. An employee who is willing to steal for me is willing to steal from me.

8. It is none of my business what you do at night, but if dissipation affects what you do the next day, and you do half as much as I demand, you'll last half as long as you hoped to.

9. Don't tell me what I'd like to hear but what I ought to hear. I dont want a valet for my vanity, but for my dollars.

10. Dont kick if I kick, if you're worth while correcting you're worth while keeping. I dont waste time cutting specks out of rotten apples.

The abolition of the poll tax is to be submitted to the people at the election in November. The petition to submit the question by the referendum method requires thirty five thousand signatures.

The Question of Glasses
Are they needed or not?
The question is easily answered by those who can't see well without them, but for a great many who see well and still suffer from the effect of eye-strain it can only be decided after a careful examination. Such an examination I am prepared to give you, and an honest opinion as to what is needed. No operation. No drugs. No glasses unless necessary.
